Approaches to Learning, Testing and Researching L2 Vocabulary Stewart Webb 2020-08-26 This volume brings together a collection of chapters focused on the learning, testing, and researching of L2 vocabulary by leading international researchers including Paul Nation, Barta Lafer, Frank Boers, Elke Putnam, and Oriana Garfield. The chapters cover a wide range of relevant issues, such as:

- Is it useful to read a book to learn vocabulary? Which types of input encountered outside of the classroom are effective in vocabulary learning?
- What is the best strategy for teaching word meanings in context?
- How do students learn vocabulary from television programs and websites?
- How can the effectiveness of vocabulary learning be measured?

In addition, the book includes a discussion of the role of vocabulary in language proficiency and the impact of technology on vocabulary development.
