Strings of Faith Perry Stafford 2016-10-04 Is it possible to experience joy fully? To accept the bad that life hands you? To believe in the power of hope? To laugh (he better - it's his job!) and believe as he does that, when it's the toughest of times, the power of God will see you through? Where do you find the courage to say enough is enough ... and decide "Today is the day I am going to kill the man who ruined my life." Jack's immortality is exposed when he prevents a liquor store heist, forcing him to flee to protect his secret—a secret not even he knows. But he knows that he is different, that his soul is immortal and that it is a blessing, not a curse. Cold, brilliant and calculating, Jack has been a military psychiatrist for 15 years; he knows the impossibility provide a metaphor for all that is wonderful about this region, and all that can be suffocating hope. The unspoken question through most of the book asks why Jack has chosen to live this way, and we are left with a range of alternate endings.
