"All-electric" narratives are the first in-depth study of time-saving electrical appliances in American literature. It examines the literary depiction of refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, ovens, ranges, washing machines, dryers, dishwashers, toasters, blenders, hand-held mixers, and microwave ovens. The author explores how U.S. writers have unearthed the paradoxes inherent to claims of appliances' capacity to give back time to their user, transport them into a technologically-progressive future, or return them to some pastoral past. In so doing, she reveals literary appliances' role in raising questions about gender norms and sexuality, racial exclusion and erasure, class anxieties, the ramifications of mechanization, the perils and possibilities of conformity, the limitations of patriarchy, and the inevitable fallacy of utopian thinking while both shaping and radically disrupting the literary forms in which they operated.
