Teaching Writing from a Writer's Point of View

Robert Evans 2012-04-05 Teaching Writing from a Writer's Point of View is a new, unique collection of essays that addresses two key problems with traditional teaching methods. First, by placing the experiences of the individual writer at the heart of the teaching process, Teaching Writing from a Writer's Point of View helps writers to develop a stronger sense of their own voice and style. Second, by emphasizing the importance of creativity and self-expression, Teaching Writing from a Writer's Point of View helps writers to develop a stronger sense of their own identity as writers.
