SolderSmoke 2014-11-16 SolderSmoke is the story of a secret, after-hours life in electronics. By 1937, when he left the BUF, he formed his own organization, the British National Socialist League (BNSL). It was for the latter organization that Joyce penned National Socialism Now—his manifesto to the British people on how a National Socialist Britain would be structured. It includes sections on the "meaning of National Socialism," "The menace of Class War and Snobbery," "The National Socialist structuring of government," the "Need of a National Socialist revolution," the "National Socialist state," "Machinery and shorter hours," "Scientific regulation as opposed to Laissez Faire," a detailed discussion on the future of the Empire and foreign policy, the need to use "legal and constitutional methods," religious freedom, and the Jewish Question. Although the BNSL was highly active, it was never allowed the chance to test itself electorally, as the advent of the war—against which Joyce warned in his manifesto—saw the mass arrest of dissidents in Britain and Joyce's exile in Germany. The second essay, Fascism and Jewry, was written as a BUF leaflet in 1935, which describes the attacks on the BUF by Jews and the organisation's official response. This new edition has been completely reset with a new biography of the author, and has 54 supplementary footnotes to allow the modern reader to understand all the references in the text to events and personalities of the time.

minded radio friends, to stay up late into the night working on strange projects, and to build embarrassingly large antennas in my neighborhood. SolderSmoke takes you into the basement workshops and electronics parts stores of these exotic foreign places, and lets you experience the life of an expatriate geek. If you are looking for restoration projects, solid advice, or technical addiction gives us something in common, something that transcends national differences. And our electronics gives us the means to communicate. United by a common interest in radio, and drawn closer together by means of the internet, we form an "International Brotherhood of Electronic Wizards." Basic Antennas Joel R. Hallas 2008 Nothing in Reserve Jack Lewis 2011 Nothing in Reserve invites the reader to an intimate glimpse of one soldier's journey to Iraq and Afghanistan. True stories set in wartime, these are not war stories. Jack Lewis offers an unexpectedly vulnerable glimpse into one of the timeless tests men have faced: going to war, and returning home. While the veteran will find honesty and truth within, this book brings a fresh insight to anyone interested in what it is we ask of our soldiers. Early stories give an authentic and often funny glimpse of military life, building to a crisis of self all too common among returning soldiers. The final two chapters are simple: a real question of how we move through our lives, acknowledging mortality and pain without becoming lost within it. Jack shares with us his own journey toward elusive redemption.

An American Artist in Tokyo Northwest artist Frances Blakemore had a lifelong love affair with Japan. She first went to Japan in 1935 and spent most of her adult life in Tokyo. Her experience with Japan encompassed the entire period from preWorld War II militarism to postwar modernization. Illustrated with photographs and striking color reproductions of her work, this book is an artist's book project on military 'psychological operations'. A collection of over 120 propaganda leaflets that have been dropped by the US Army on Afghanistan and Iraq, as well as other similar material. Based exclusively on material found on the Internet, this publication gives a wide-ranging insight into the propaganda strategies that the American army has adopted in the Near East since September 11. The book is part of the "FSYOP - Capture their minds and their hearts and souls will follow" project, which Christoph Büchel and Giovanni Carmine created for the "7th Biennale of Sharjah (United Arab Emirates)."--Cornerstone publications website (distributor).
