The Apostles' Creed Marshall D. Johnson 2009 'I believe in God, the Father almighty, creator of heaven and earth...'. In the majestic opening phrases of the Apostles' Creed we hear the passion of the early Church to define and substantiate the core of Christian belief. In the face of numerous prevailing heresies, the Apostles' Creed declared the uniqueness of the Three-in-One God and the universal scope of the divine work of salvation. This book is an accessible introduction to what remains the most widely used of all Christendom's confessions of faith. Going through each phrase of the Apostles' Creed in turn, the author unpacks the meaning and explains its significance both historically and for Christians today. While the creed does not spell out how we are to live as disciples day by day, it is a unique 'rule of faith' that provides continuity of belief from generations past into our own time.

Contents list:
• Why creeds?
• I believe in God, the Father Almighty, creator of heaven and earth
• I believe in Jesus Christ, God's only Son, our Lord
• He was conceived... and born
• He suffered, was crucified, died, was buried
• The great omission: between birth and death
• He descended... rose... ascended... will come to judge
• I believe in the Holy Spirit
• I believe in the holy catholic Church, the communion of saints
• I believe in the forgiveness of sins
• I believe in the resurrection and the list
