Eventually you will discover additional information and viewpoints by spending more time and effort. But you will discover that you grow in every area every moment as long as you have the right attitude about learning. This will naturally lead you to the same conclusions you would have if you followed the general principles of living a better life. Python programming language has also been very useful for me. I do not think that Python has eliminated or is set to replace any other programming language, but it has the potential to complement and enhance the capabilities of other languages. As you accumulate experience in different areas of software development, you will naturally form your own thoughts and opinions about which programming language is best suited to your needs. I have found that Python is well-suited to many types of applications, and it is also a great language for beginners to learn. It is important to keep in mind that the choice of programming language will depend on the specific requirements of your project and the personal preferences of the developers involved.
